PHILADELPHIA'S DARK SIDE

October 2, 2010

Halloween comes early with eerie fun in Philly! Take a guided tour through the ruins of Eastern State Penitentiary, the castle-like prison which stars as a spooky setting for films and TV shows. Relax over lunch in an old firehouse now home to a famous chef. Take a narrated trolley ride to Philly's Dark Side, seeing ghost-haunted sites, famous graves, and a home of Edgar Allen Poe. Join this spooky tour for unforgettable fun!

Head to the massive Eastern State Penitentiary in Philadelphia's charming Fairmount neighborhood for a delightfully spooky experience. Castle-like Eastern State was built as America's second most expensive building after the U.S. Capitol. Its intimidating walls once held Al Capone and Willie Sutton; now they enclose the ruins of cell blocks and prison yards, which you will tour with a prison guide. Discover an eerie beauty in the former prison, which is now the setting of movies and TV shows like "Ghost Hunters." Recover from this giant haunted house by relaxing over a 3-course lunch at Jack's Firehouse, a famous old firehouse just across the street from the prison that has been converted to a restaurant by award-winning chef Jack McDavid. In the afternoon, explore Philadelphia's Dark Side on a narrated trolley ride to scary places. See the home of the father of Edgar Allen Poe, where the writer is thought to have composed "The Black Cat" and "The Tell Tale Heart." At famous Christ Church, get off the trolley to tour the Burial Ground. Here you will see graves of signers of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence and learn about the plague of 1793, which claimed a tenth of Philadelphia's population. See the tragic side of lovely Washington Square, evidenced in graves of Revolutionary War and plague victims haunted by Leah, a ghost from the 1800s. See famous old City Tavern, and learn about its bride ghost. Yet another ghost haunts the storied square rigger Moshulu, which you will see berthed at Penn's Landing. Head home after the trolley ride knowing that Halloween can hold no fears, having survived the scary sights of Philly's Dark Side! Expected arrival in Lancaster is 6:15 PM, York 7:00 PM, Red Lion 7:30 PM.
